

106th Infantry Division

The 106th "Golden Lion" Infantry Division was activated at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, on 13 March 1943. After participating in the Number 5 Tennessee Maneuvers, the division transferred to Camp Atterbury, Indiana, and subsequently deployed to the European Theater of Operations (ETO) in November 1944.

The 106th was activated as a "triangular" division organized around the 422d, 423d and 424th Infantry Regiments. However, during the Battle of the Bulge, the 422d and 423d Infantry Regiments were virtually destroyed near Schonberg in the Schnee Eifel salient. Accordingly, the two regiments were replaced with the 3d and 159th Infantry Regiments. Although the 422d and 423d Infantry Regiments were reconstituted, they did not rejoin the 106th Infantry Division until May 1945.

The division returned to the United States on 1 October 1945 and was inactivated the following day at Camp Shanks, New York.

In 1942 a typical infantry regiment consisted of a headquarters and band, a headquarters company, a service company, an anti-tank company, a cannon company, and three infantry battalions.

In March 1943 the basic infantry regiment was reorganized to include a headquarters, a headquarters company, a service company, an anti-tank company, and three infantry battalions.

Each of the three infantry battalions consisted of a headquarters and headquarters company, three rifle companies and a heavy weapons company. Within each regiment, the 1st Battalion consisted of Companies A through D, the 2d Battalion consisted of Companies E through H, and the 3d Battalion consisted of Companies I through M (there was no Company J).
