

119th Infantry is coming back to life—just 24 years to the month after the regiment carved its niche in World war history by smashing through the Hindenburg line in France.

The regiment has been reactivated at Fort Jackson, S. C., and is a part of the 30th Division, the same division of which the 119th of World war days was a part. It was at Fort Jackson in April, 1919, that the World war regiment was mustered out of service.
